SUGGESTED BOOKS FOR HICH-SCHOOL LIBRARIES

The published suggestions for high-school libraries conventionally exhibit one or both of two defects. Either they are so formidable in cost that they leave the typical small high school hopeless of acquiring them or their equivalent, or they stress some aspects of the library to the neglect of others. The suggested lists of books given in this bulletin have been compiled with the purpose of placing before the smaller schools properly balanced sets of library equipment that would be well within their reach financially. Different departments of the University of Colorado will gladly cooperate with schools wishing more extensive bibliographies for special fields.

Three lists of books are suggested at costs of $350, $350 and $400 respectively. It is recommended that a school provide itself with all of List I before beginning on List II, and with all of List II before beginning on List III. The amounts of money assigned to the various divisions of the library have been arbitrarily determined, but with the intention of leaving no field of material interest wholly unprovided for. The appropriations called for are not continuing except in the case of the periodicals. The proper policy for boards desirous of building up the library equipment of their schools, however, is to make an annual appropriation for that purpose in the same manner as for other needs of the school.

The general principle of selection of titles for this bulletin has been to list the books found in numerous bibliographies, and then to place these books on the three lists in the order of their frequency of mention in the bibliographies examined. The effect of this is to eliminate the individual prejudice of bibliographers for or against a book.

Obviously, however, this one principle of selection could not be followed exclusively. In the first place, it would give the much-advertised books an unmerited advantage over those less widely advertised. Again, it would give the old books an advantage over the new. It might also lead to the inclusion of books on List I, to which it would be impossible to build with a subsequent list, except by wasteful duplication. Lastly, it would result in bad balance within particular fields; for from the fact that in some divisions of a field there is a dearth of good books the few available volumes are each mentioned often in the bibliographies, while in other divisions which are covered excellently by many books there is bound to be no general favorite. Selection on the basis of frequency of mention in bibliographies therefore would leave large sections of some fields untouched until List III, and would overemphasize others in List I. These difficulties have been considerably minimized by submitting the tentative selections in their particular fields to some twenty professors of the University, all of whom have counseled gladly and helpfully.

Question has been raised as to whether these lists contemplate a library for the student or the teacher. The answer must be, "For both". Readable books for students have been sought, but extensive works have in some cases been incorporated for the reference of the instructor primarily.

After each title is given an abbreviation of the company, seller or publisher, from which the book is to be obtained. The prices noted are usually net, and are subject for the most part to a discount to schools. On the whole, a saving of 10 to 20 per cent should be made from the printed price on orders of any size. Competitive bids from local dealers and city jobbers should be sought if a school is to secure the worth of its money. The Librarian of the University of Colorado, Professor C. Henry Smith, will be glad to assist schools desirous of placing to advantage their larger orders.

The edition and binding of each book have not been indicated, since the price will ordinarily suffice to make these points clear. Care has been taken to avoid bindings that will not prove reasonably durable. The print will in nearly all cases be large enough to do away with eye strain. At the same time endeavor has been made to save in every possible direction. Books listed at $.43 under Book Supply Company are the Burt's Home Library; those listed at $1.13 are the Household Edition of the Poets. Books listed at $.50 under E. P. Dutton are the second grade of Everyman's Library. Titles and prices have been verified from the latest catalogues. Hardly any of the books should be found out of print. The disturbance in the publishing world, due to the war, may render a few of these titles not available for the present, but it is assumed that this condition is likely to be only temporary.
